The Story of the

U. S. S. Beckham

On October 14, 1944, the assault transport U. S. S. Beckham slid down the ways of the California Shipbuilding Corporation, San Pedro, California.

Numerically, she was designated as the APA-133 ("APA" stands for "Auxiliary Personnel, Assault"), and was an example of American inventiveness in fighting a new kind of war with new weapons. She was a vital vertebra in the backbone of the new amphibious Navy, designed to transport troops to an invasion point and, using her twenty-six landing craft, put combat personnel on the beach fighting.

In length she measured 455 feet; 62 feet in beam. Her displacement was 15,000 tons and she carried a complement of 534 officers and men, with capacity for over 2,000 troops.

She was commissioned on December 10. Captain Albin Rufus Sodergren, U.S.N., assumed command. Underway for the first time on December 16, she began her shakedown cruise and amphibious training program during which everyone on board learned his job; how to operate winches, launch boats in a hurry without damaging them, land through murderous surf on a hard beach, handle cargo, fire the 5-inch gun, the 40's, the 20 millimeters. These activities took her to San Diego, Oceanside and San Clemente Island, all on the California Coast.

Then to San Francisco for loading.

She set out on her first wartime mission on February 8, 1945, with base supplies for a Marine air group on Engebi Island, Eniwetok Atoll, in the Marshall Islands. This equipment was delivered on Washington's Birthday after a successful independent voyage across the Pacific during which all on board grew used to their ship and their assignments on board.

Orders arrived on March 2 assigning the Beckham to Task Unit 12.6.2, destination — Iwo Jima. The crew greeted the news with cheers, for it was currently the most hotly contested battleground in the Pacific and they were impatient to see something of the war they had come so far to join.

It was an exciting trip. In convoy this time; at night the Superforts winging overhead in the first massed raids on Tokyo.

Arriving at the rendezvous area off Iwo Jima, she stood off and on until the time was ripe to embark the battle-weary Fourth Marines. On the morning of the 14th she steamed in by the light of star shells until the concussion of mortar fire could be felt, the chatter of machine gun and rifle fire heard, and the flame-throwers seen.

The Beckham was off again on the 20th of March with a full load of casualties and combat-fatigued Marines of the Fourth Division, enroute to their base in the Hawaiian Islands. On March 22 she stopped briefly at Guam where the most seriously wounded were transferred to the base hospital and her boats were turned over to the Boat Pool for further use in the forward area. Another stop on the 27th at Eniwetok, for fuel. Here she helped in the rescue of several men lost overboard as the result of a collision between two other vessels.

On April 4 she stood into Pearl Harbor for the first time. Two days later she was at Maui where her passengers were debarked into the midst of a typical Island celebration of their victory — band, hula girls, Red Cross girls throwing oranges and candy, leis, cheers and happy tears. That the "Becky" (as she was now affectionately called) acquitted herself nobly on this trip was amply documented, in part by the following correspondence: From Lt. R. C. Rothwell, Commanding Officer, 2nd Battalion, 24th Marines, Fourth Marine Division:

"... to extend our most sincere appreciation to the Commanding Officer, his ship's officers and members of the crew for the wholehearted cooperation and desire to make the voyage efficient and pleasant . . . the everpresent desire on the part of all hands to be of service made an impression of a highly efficient ship's company."

This letter, endorsed by General C. B. Gates of the Fourth Marines, was forwarded through channels, and returned to the ship with the notation:

"FORWARDED WITH PLEASURE"

C. W. NIMITZ,

Commander in Chief,

U. S. Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean Areas.

The ship returned to Pearl Harbor on April 17 for fuel, supplies and repairs. There followed, from the 20th of April to the 28th, another period of intensive amphibious training at Maalaea Bay, Maui, with the Beach Party ashore, and landings effected under combat conditions, complete with air and naval gunfire support, rockets and smoke screens.

Back in Honolulu, the Beckham received for transportation to Okinawa units of the 233d General Hospital, including 79 Army nurses and Red Cross girls and various M. P., Quartermaster, Signal Company, Anti-Aircraft Artillery and Maintenance outfits. She took her departure from Honolulu on May 8, 1945.

Steaming Westward, she again stopped at Eniwetok (May 16-20) and Ulithi in the West Carolines (May 24 - June 20), arriving at Okinawa on June 24. While lying at anchor and unloading cargo the ship underwent several Japanese air attacks, one Kamikaze suicide plane missing her by a narrow margin and being brought down within 1,000 yards of her anchorage.

The Beckham left Okinawa for Saipan in the Marianas on June 28 where she anchored on July 2. There she debarked Army, Navy and Marine casualties from Okinawa and took aboard passengers for Pearl Harbor and the States from many units. These were chiefly "high point" men from the Army and Army Air Corps; men returning for reassignment or discharge.

Underway on July 3, she reached Pearl Harbor on Friday the 13th; indeed a black-letter day, for she learned that instead of proceeding to the West Coast she was to be returned immediately to forward areas.

On July 26 the Beckham left Pearl Harbor with Okinawa again as her destination, carrying several Naval Construction Battalion units ("Seabees"), an Army Headquarters Company and an Infantry Replacement Company.

She stopped once more at Eniwetok (August 3-4) and Ulithi (August 8-18). It was here that news of the Japanese surrender reached her. There were no fireworks; after the treachery of December 7, 1941, any Japanese commitment was regarded with distrust.

She arrived at Okinawa on August 22, discharged her passengers and cargo, loaded again, and was off for Korea on September 5. This time she carried units of several Port companies, a Field Hospital, Engineers and Military Police.

In the occupation of Korea the Beckham was among the first elements of the U. S. Navy to participate. In convoy, she steamed into the harbor of Jinsen on September 8. Some of her officers and passenger officers attended the Japanese surrender ceremonies which took place in Seoul, the capital, on September 9. The Beckham's P-boats were helpful in unloading, not only their own ship, but also in carrying released American and British prisoners of war, unloading hospital ships and performing other pressing duties in Jinsen harbor. They discharged their tasks with credit in spite of a 30-foot rise and fall of tide which made the harbor a hazardous place for boat operation.

She left for Okinawa on the 13th of September but no sooner had she dropped anchor there (September 15) than a typhoon warning was received which made it necessary to get under way again. In company with many other vessels from the Western anchorage she fought her way out into the East China Sea under difficult and dangerous storm conditions. Visibility was nil, and there was a constant threat from drifting mines, more menacing than wind or water. The ship next her in column struck a mine and had to be towed back to port when the fury of the storm abated on September 18.

The next port of call was in the Philippine Islands. On September 25 the Beckham dropped anchor in Guiuan Roadstead, off the island of Samar, in Leyte Gulf. Here she embarked personnel of the 32nd Seabees and took departure, after a stop for fuel at Leyte, on October 4, for Tientsin, China.

Her passage through the China and Yellow Seas was eventful. She experienced another typhoon, her lookouts were kept in a state of alarm by huge jellyfish that looked exactly like submerged mines, and their vigilance was rewarded by sighting several real mines that were promptly disposed of by gunfire. The effectiveness of her radarmen was also proved by several fast-moving targets which they correctly identified as ducks.

The Beckham anchored off the Taku Forts in the Gulf of Pohai on the 14th of October. High point of the trip for those fortunate enough to rate liberty was the excursion up river by LCI to Tientsin. Here they enjoyed their first 'rickshaw ride and the other pleasures of a metropolitan liberty; their first since leaving Honolulu in July.

Leaving Taku on the 18th, she continued down the China coast and put in at Tsingtao on October 20. Here she completed unloading and all of the crew had an extended opportunity to see the sights of a large oriental city.

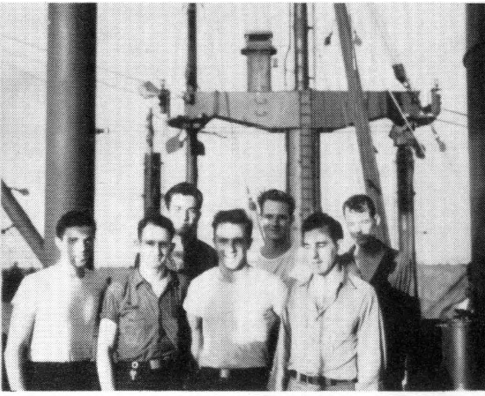

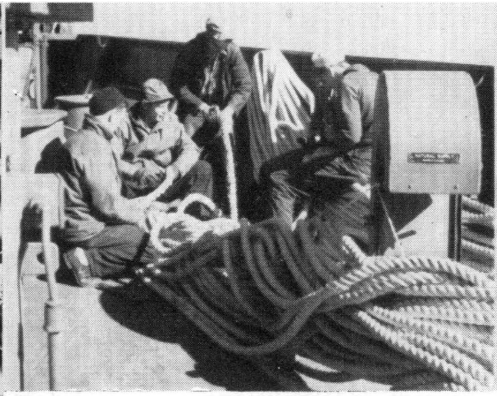

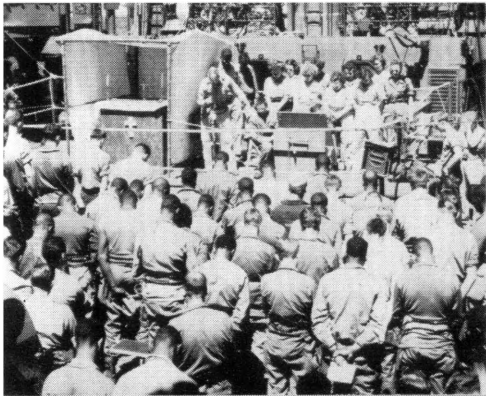

It was at Tsingtao that word was received that the Beckham had at last been assigned to the "Magic Carpet"; that she would proceed to the Philippines and thence to the United States with a load of returning veterans. She weighed anchor on October 27, touched briefly at Okinawa and reached war-torn Manila on the 3rd of November.

On the 6th she docked and was loaded to capacity with passengers, who overflowed into cargo spaces and onto the decks, and set out at once on her first "Magic Carpet" run — homeward bound.

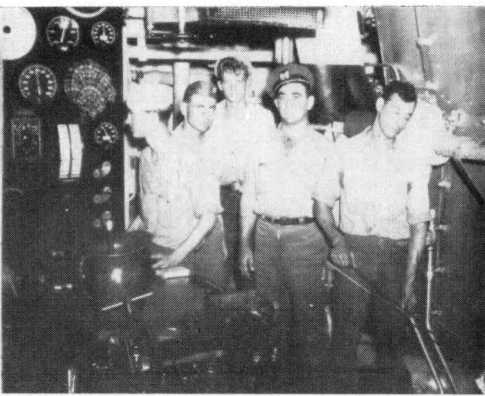

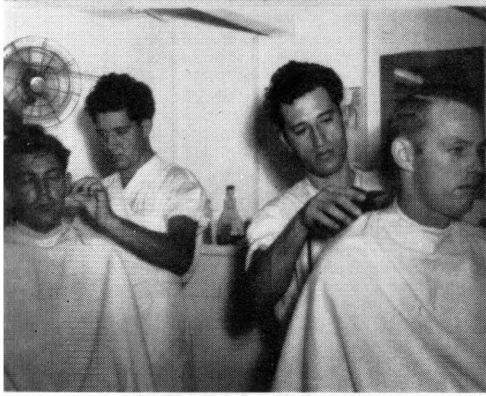

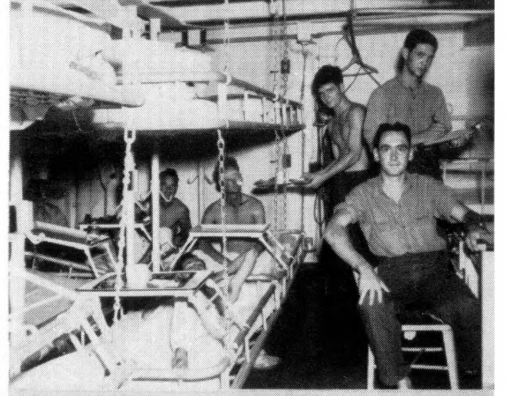

She was to take the great circle route to San Francisco, but heavy weather and head winds forced her to put in at Midway for fuel. (This change in course is not shown on the chart on Page 6). In spite of this change she reached San Francisco on schedule, September 27, 1945.

This book cannot foretell the Beckham's future. But whether she continues in Navy service, is transferred to the Merchant Marine or even sold to a foreign nation, those who served aboard her during the months of war are proud to have known her and confident that she will be, as she has been, creditably—
